It was late at night. The stars were shining bright. There was a slight breeze, a little cool, but refreshing. The crickets were signing, and the forest was softly swaying to the music.

Three kids were slipping in sleeping bags. But one was wide-awake, thinking deeply about the future.

"What are you doing Ash?" asked Misty sleepily, just woken up from a dream.

"Nothing, just thinking." he replied.

"Well that's a first!"

"Hey!" screamed Ash. "It happens allot ok? I'm normal, just like you! Why do you always have to bug me?"

"Geez! Next time I'll be more careful talking to you while your thinking!" she mumbled back.

"I'm sorry. I'm just confused about everything. I don't know what's going to happen, and I don't know what to expect next! I want to be the greatest pokemon master, but it seems so far away!" He sighed. "I don't know why I'm talking to you, you wouldn't understand."

"Hey! Yes would!" she replied, mad. "I want to know everything about water pokemon, yet I still don't know if I can do it either!" She calmed down and continued, "Everybody has his or her doubts, but you can't let that stop you. A dream is precious, and you can't let it go! You go on with your life and try your best, and before you know it, you've succeeded! Just relax and live your life one day at a time."

Ash sat there staring at her. He didn't believe that what was just said came from her. But it did make him think, and finally, a smile appeared on his face.

"Yeah, you're right!" he said. "Thanks!"

"Well nothing is easier than helping someone dumb!" she replied mockingly.

"What me?" she replied. "This is the only me and you get it as it comes!"

"Whatever!" he said confessed. "Goodnight".

"Goodnight".

They settled themselves in there sleeping bags. Then Misty turned around to face Ash and asked: "Where am I in your future?"

Ash, confused, answered back: "Why?"

"Hum... well... because you never paid me back for my bike yet!"

"Misty!"
